Acknowledgements

We are most grateful to everyone who has contributed to this publication, both to those whose names appear as contributors and to those who provided data but who did not wish have their names included. We would also like to express our very grateful thanks to the members of the Crawley and Horsham District Organists' Association, who helped us with this Project and to Ken Sagar and Francis Knights in particular; to Roy Tricker of the Churches Conservation Trust for SE England; to our Free Church contacts listed below; to the organ builders (also listed below) who gave freely of their time to assist with queries regarding organ histories and specifications and, in this respect, to Robert Pennells, Roland Robinson, Simon Pullen and Patrick Christian in particular; and last, but by no means least, to Tony Bavistock and Tim Carder of XPS who have made this publication possible.

Foreword by Alan Thurlow

President, West Sussex Organists' Association and Organist & Master of the Choristers, Chichester Cathedral

This book is the product of two years' work by members of the West Sussex Organists' Association. The Association came into being in 1946 as a body of people with an interest in pipe organs. At that time, the membership numbered 43. Today this number has grown to 92 and almost one third of the membership has been actively involved in the production of this book. Their names are listed at the end of the Preface, together with the names of those members of the Crawley and Horsham District Organists' Association, and also some non-members, without whose help we could not have achieved this project.

The Association, having celebrated its Jubilee in 1996, sought a project to mark the Millennium that would be of interest not only to people today but also to future generations. A survey of pipe organs within the County, which said something about both the instruments themselves and also the way in which they were used at the turn of the century, was thought to fulfil the criteria. To this end a questionnaire was designed and sent to every church within the County and every secular establishment that was known to house a pipe organ. The completed questionnaires, together with photographs and other information provided, will be stored within the West Sussex County Archive from January 2001, where they may be used for research purposes by future generations.

Although every effort has been made to check the overall accuracy of the data given within these pages, it has not been possible to check the detail of each individual entry. Some contributors may have completed parts of the questionnaire from memory and it is likely, in such instances, that there may well be errors and/or omissions of detail, for which we apologise. It should perhaps be said that the task was enormous and this 'Domesday Book' of pipe organs is unlikely to score any more highly for accuracy than did the original Domesday Book!

All Anglican churches within the County were included in the survey, as were all churches of other Christian denominations where a contact address was known. Similarly, non-ecclesiastical establishments (schools, hospitals, cinemas, private houses etc.) were also sent a questionnaire. Many did not respond initially and, while every effort has been made to solicit completed questionnaires, with details re-sent where these had been lost or mislaid, the outcome has not been successful in every case.

As stated, the project was a survey of pipe organs within West Sussex and how they are used today. The fact that a large number of churches returned a questionnaire relating only to an electronic organ caused something of a dilemma. However, it was decided that, although the organ could not feature in detail within the book, every church that had returned a questionnaire should be listed and the contributors acknowledged. However, ALL completed questionnaires, regardless of the type of organ, will be forwarded to the County's Archive to be stored in alphabetical order within each Deanery. Not all churches have a name in the contributors' column. This is due to the fact that some contributors omitted their names, or asked that their names should not be included. One church felt so strongly about the matter that they stamped this section with the wording 'Data Protection Act – permission refused'. You will also find that we have included three churches which, although technically in East Sussex, are so 'on the border' that they may well find themselves within West Sussex should boundaries be changed in the future.

Finally, as President of the West Sussex Organists' Association, I would like to record the especial gratitude of our members to those whose enthusiastic and hard-working efforts have made the project possible and have brought it to fruition in this book. In particular to those of our members who so readily gave of their time to check, gather and input data; to Gavin Argent for taking supplementary photographs; to Nicholas Plumley for the most attractive cover illustration; to Sam Hall, our Treasurer, for dealing with the finance of the project; to Peter Page for his painstaking efforts on computer work in converting text files and editing photographs; but most of all to Elisabeth Alder who so readily agreed to lead and co-ordinate the project and whose experienced eye and concerted efforts have ensured that this splendid and attractive book has appeared on schedule.

Preface – How Did We Do It?

Liz Alder, Project Co-ordinator

The first thing we did was to draw up lists according to the geographical boundaries of the County's twelve Deaneries. This was achieved with the aid of the Diocesan Directories (both Anglican and Roman Catholic) and contacts within the Free Church. A questionnaire, designed by the Project Committee, was then despatched in an enormous mailing. This was at the beginning of January 1999 with recipients being given until 30th April 1999 to complete and return their questionnaire. Each one, which was returned with a contact name and address, was acknowledged and requests for photographs and documents to be returned, noted. The names of contributors (unless withheld) were recorded for inclusion in the publication. Then, when the majority of questionnaires had been returned, a social gathering was arranged, hosted by the Cathedral Organist and his wife, when all 'Data Gatherers' were briefed by the Project Co-ordinator and received their 'Deanery packs' of returned questionnaires. Where possible, Data Gatherers had been allocated to the Deanery in which they live, or an adjacent Deanery, so that they might use their local knowledge to check details and also to add any church or building known to house a pipe organ but which had previously been omitted from their list. One problem which the Committee faced was the existence of another organists' association within the County, namely the Crawley and Horsham District Organists' Association. This meant that the West Sussex Organists' Association had very few members in the northern part of the County, making it difficult to cover this fairly substantial area. Fortunately the Secretary of the CHDOA, together with others (one a non-member who later joined the WSOA) very nobly volunteered to gather the necessary data which, without their help, would have proved to be an extremely difficult task.

Data Gathering was far from easy. When recipients were telephoned, it was discovered that questionnaires had been 'mislaidd' or 'lost' or 'had never arrived' and had to be re-sent. In many instances the Data Gatherers found that they had to complete the questionnaires themselves because there was no one available at the church to undertake this task. This they did by making a visit to the church (finding many locked and having to telephone to make another visit) then talking, if possible, to the organist and other church members and taking photographs where necessary. Circumstances were such that they never quite knew what they would find. On one such occasion, a member of the team was bitten by an over-zealous dog – apparently 'not badly', but the bite did require medical attention! Once this painstaking task had been completed, it was time for the 'Data Inputters' to begin their work – again with files farmed out to them in Deaneries by the Project Co-ordinator. A non-member, who had agreed to assist with Data Input exceeded his generosity by designing a computer programme which enabled data to be entered via a series of input 'boxes'. The Project Co-ordinator e-mailed copies of the programme, or delivered it on disk to each of the inputters thereby enabling neat text files, of standard format, to be created from each data entry. Once created, they could be e-mailed to the Text and Graphics Specialist, thereby greatly simplifying this part of the Project.

Again, the task was not as easy as it sounds. Handwriting, in some instances, could only be deciphered after a great deal of deliberation. In many instances questionnaires were returned without an organ specification. This had been requested on a separate sheet and apparently either overlooked, or forgotten in the exuberance and relief at finally getting the completed form into the post! However, once the Text and Graphics Specialist had received the electronically generated text file, he was able to create a page for the church or building concerned, adding previously scanned and edited photographs and logos where these existed. Where a photograph was considered essential but had not been submitted, another member of the Association came to the rescue in offering to travel around the County with his digital camera. The use of digital photography not only ensured that the pictures were of excellent quality but also enabled them to be transmitted electronically, thereby saving valuable time. All that was then left was to design the cover. Yet another member, who is also a well known local artist, produced a most attractive collage of a number of West Sussex pipe organs and the book had begun to take shape – thanks to the team of people whose efforts and talents over the past 2 years had made it all possible and whose names are recorded on the following page.

How to Use This Book

This publication contains entries relating to pipe organs, harmoniums (including American reed organs) and barrel organs within the County of West Sussex in the year 2000. However three organs within East Sussex are also included because of their proximity to the West Sussex border viz. St Margaret, Ditchling, St John the Baptist, Hove and SS Peter & John, Wivelsfield. All entries will be found in the body of the book listed under their place name, in alphabetical order. Where an organ is known to have an entry in the National Pipe Organ Register (NPOR), a cross-reference to the NPOR number is included at the foot of that page.

There is also a comprehensive list of ALL the entries within the pages which follow. The list is in alphabetical order of place name, followed by the name of the building and then the name(s) of the contributor(s). Where there is a blank in the contributors' column, this is because we do not have the information, or because the information was withheld. Churches and other buildings with pipe organs are listed first, followed by those with harmoniums or American reed organs, then those with barrel organs. Finally those with electronic organs or other keyboard instruments are listed. Details of these could not be included in the body of the book.

Data was gathered by means of a questionnaire and every questionnaire returned (whatever the instrument) will be stored in the County's Archive from the end of the year 2000. Parishes were asked not only about their organs but also for supplementary data that would be of interest to future generations. Due to lack of space, it was not possible to include all of this data in the publication. However all is to be archived for reference purposes. Those data items which are included in the questionnaire but which have not been published are as follows:

Hymn book(s) used.

Psalter used.

Current organist's name and date appointed.

Organist's honorarium and any music qualifications held.

Names of previous organists and the years they served.

Details about the composition of the choir and the services sung. A précis only has been included in this publication.

Details of any problems currently being experienced. (Some points were included in the publication).

Souvenirs containing information of interest e.g. recital programmes, potted histories, old newspaper articles and even one tape recording.

NB: unless otherwise referenced, the information contained within this publication, including personal opinion where expressed, has been taken from the returned questionnaires and it should not be read as the view of the authors, who may or may not share the opinions expressed.

The Organ Cases of St Andrew, Nuthurst.

Sadly these beautiful cases no longer house a pipe organ, as will be noted from the list of electronic instruments given above.

One case is in the south aisle (shown on the right) and the other is in the north aisle. The tie bars inserted in the church walls have been allowed to pierce the front display pipes.
